About This Talk

Grieving is tough. It is emotionally strenuous for those who mourn, as well as for their supporters struggling to find the right thing to say. The grieving process is handled by everyone differently, which makes it that much more complicated. The night's speaker, Dr. Robert A. Neimeyer, PHD, has research interests in Psychotherapy Process and Outcome, Psychology of Grief and Loss, Constructivist Psychology and Depression and Suicide. Needless to say, he knows and has a deep understanding of grief and its many complications. Dr. Neimeyer's talk titled, "Grief and the Quest for Meaning," will explore this topic and provide an interesting and educational perspective on a complex subject we all have to deal with, but don't exactly understand how. Please join us for this wonderful opportunity.
